Ku Klux Klansmen Welcomed in Newark Church

Ku Klux Klansmen in full regalia seated in the auditorium of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church in Newark, N. J., and listening to an address by one of their own leaders on the aims of the Klan.

ASTONISHMENT was expressed in official circles over the boldness of the Ku Klux Klan in sending forty hooded and gowned Klansmen to a public service in the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, Newark, N. J., Sunday evening, March 11.

The forty Klansmen entered the Newark church while the choir was singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers." They marched up the main aisle and one of them, later introduced as "the Exalted Cyclops," mounted the pulpit and shook hands with the pastor, the Rev. Parris C. Greenley. The latter read a text and introduced "the Exalted Cyclops," who, without removing his mask, said:

"This is a white man's organization for exalting the Caucasian race and teaching the doctrine of white supremacy. This does not mean, as some would have you believe, that we are enemies of the colored and mongrel races, but does mean that we are organized to maintain the solidarity of the white race.

"This is a Gentile organization, and as such has as its mission the interpretation of the highest ideals of the white

Gentile people. However, we sing no hymns of hate against the Jew.

"It is a Protestant organization and as such has as its restricted to those who accept the tenets of true Christianity, which is essentially Protestant."

The speaker denied that any Klansmen had been concerned in the Mer Rouge murders in Louisiana and asserted that nowhere did Klansmen violate the law or take it into their own hands.

The pastor followed the address with a sermon on "Americanism" without mentioning

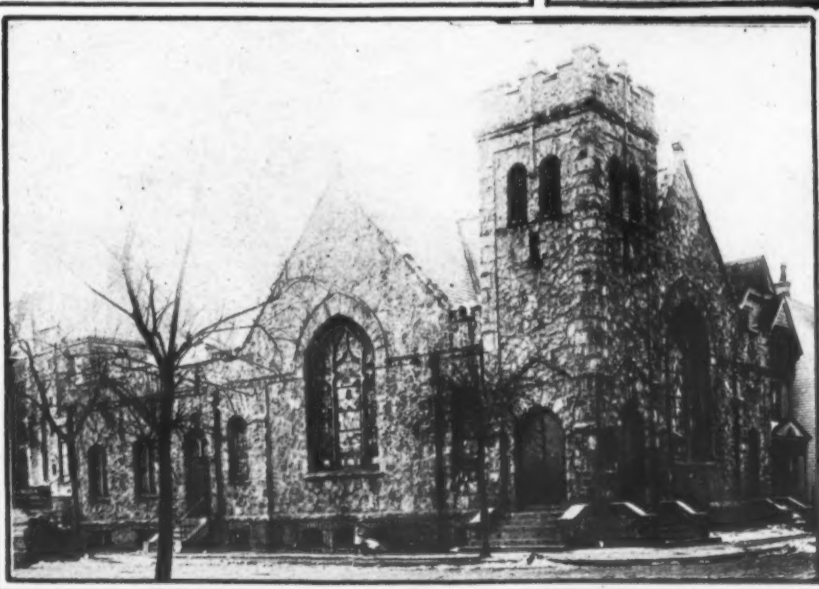

"Exalted Cyclops" speaking from the pulpit of the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church in Newark, N. J. He made a brief address denying charges made against the Klan.

the Klan by name. He admitted after the service that the visit of the Klansmen had been expected and that arrangements for it had been made with him in advance.

What opinion of the apparent church sanction given to this lawless and dangerous organization will be expressed by the governing authorities of the church is still a matter of conjecture.

A CASE that aroused great interest and sympathy in parents throughout the country was the recent kidnapping of the little three-year-old son of Judge Minkin of Albany, N. Y. The child had disappeared at the same time as a new nursemaid who had been employed by the parents. The heart-broken parents put forth every energy to discover the whereabouts of the child and had the hearty co-operation of the police in various cities of the East. Forty-eight hours after the child's disappearance he was found at Newburgh, N. Y., where he had been taken by the nursemaid, Mary Conkling. He was unharmed and unafraid as the result of his experience. The Newburgh police discovered him in a moving picture theatre enjoying the antics of Charlie Chaplin. The nursemaid was promptly placed under arrest on the charge of kidnapping. She was apprehended in a rooming-house, where she had gone immediately on arriving at Newburgh. At the time of her arrest she let another roomer of the house take the boy to the movies. The young woman probably will be examined in Albany to test her mental condition. She has told various conflicting and incoherent stories to account for her taking the child away from home, and has persistently denied that she meant to kidnap him for money or that any one was involved in a conspiracy for ransom. The woman had spent all but $11 of the $25 that she had taken from the boy's saving bank before her departure. She had bought him a sailor suit to alternate with the Teddy Bear suit he was wearing when they left home. The little fellow himself hardly knows that he has been through a terrifying experience and doesn't give any connected story of the trip. All he says is that the young woman and everybody else at the rooming-house treated him well. He is a lovable child, who makes friends with everybody and seems to have no fear. There is no doubt that the girl treated him kindly and did not harm him in any way.

LEAPS FROM MONUMENT

Albert Birney Seip, a young man of Washington, D. C., said to be a grandson of General William Birney, who commanded a division of the Union Army in the Civil War, and a great-grandson of James G. Birney, anti-slavery leader, who was the Free Soil candidate for President in 1840, hurled himself from one of the windows near the top of the Washington Monument on March 9 and plunged 504 feet to his death on the flagging below.

SUICIDE LEAPS FROM WASHINGTON MONUMENT TO FLAGGING BELOW

On the stone flagging at the foot of the Washington Monument is seen the shattered body of Albert B. Seip, who leaped from a point near the top of the Washington Monument on March 9. He eluded the guard who was continually stationed on the top of the monument and dived through a window, his body turning over and over in the air as it hurtled through 504 feet of space. Death of course was instantaneous.

o'clock about three feet from the south side of the great obelisk's base. As far as is known only one person, a man named Thomas S. Searles, witnessed the terrible scene as Seip's body plunged down from the monument.

"I was standing on the curb when suddenly I heard a noise like an airplane motor," Searles said. "I looked up. As soon as I saw a thing like a big bundle sliding down the monument, I knew what had happened and jumped away. I had no sooner moved than there was a loud thud and two sharp reports.

"The body had fallen not far from where I had been standing. The two reports came when the man's shoes hit the pavement. They had been torn by the slide down the face of the monument and the air resistance had pulled them from the feet."

Scientists estimated that only 5.6 seconds were consumed between the time Seip left the window ledge and the time his body smashed into the flagging. The force at which he struck the earth was estimated at 300,000 foot-pounds or about 150 foot-tons.

downward through the air at an estimated speed of 120 miles an hour.

Seip, who lived with his mother at 1,694 Lanier Place, was between 25 and 30 years old. Following a mental breakdown, resulting from overwork while a student at Cornell University, he had been confined in various sanitariums since 1916.

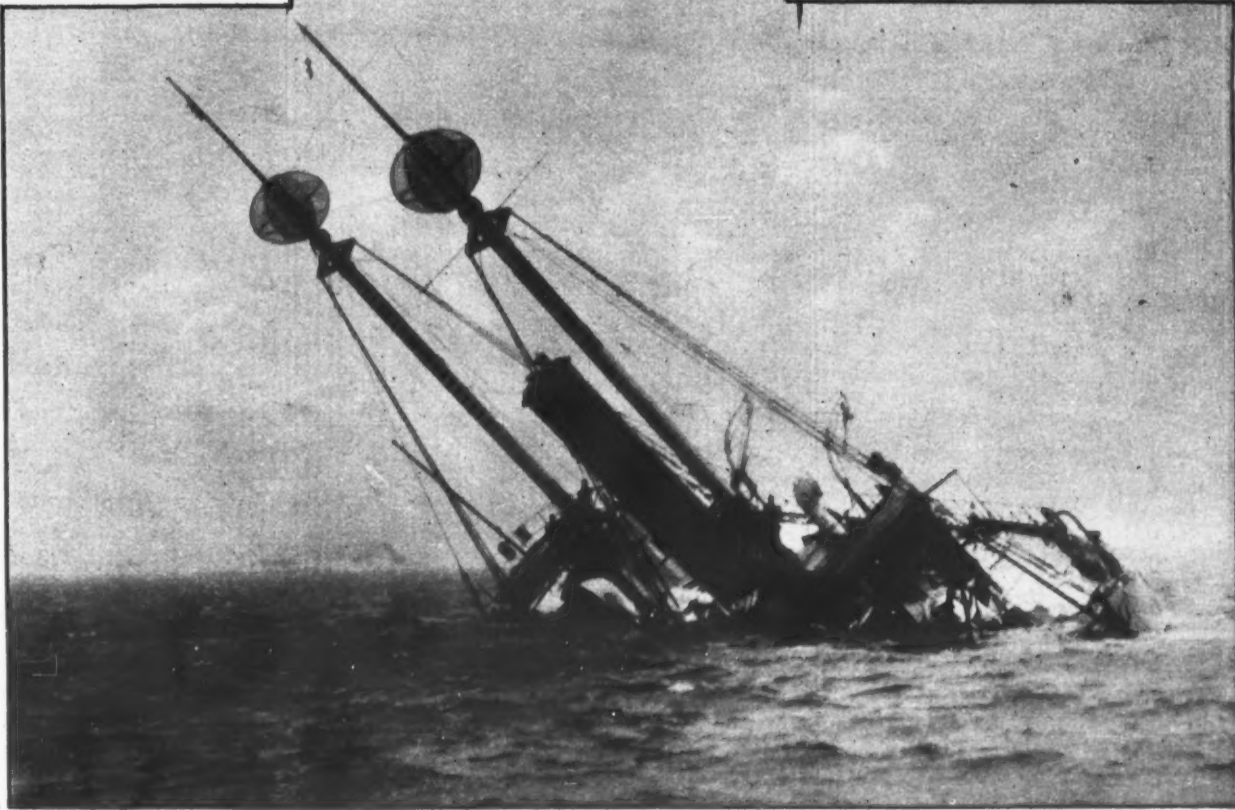

No one saw Seip leap from the window almost at the top of the monument. He was alone in the observation room from which the windows look out, when he evidently clambered up the four feet from the floor to the window ledge and threw himself into space. He must have walked up the long flight of stairs inside the monument, for C. H. Reintzell, the guard on duty at the top, said he had not made the ascent in the elevator. Reintzell did not know of the suicide until he received a telephone message from the base of the monument telling him the shattered and broken form was lying on the flagging. There seems no doubt that Seip did not fall accidentally from the great height. The ledge of the window is at the height of an ordinary man's chest, and the dead man was short in stature.

The limp body was found by guards at 1

IRISH CIVIC GUARD PARADE

(Wide World Photos.)

ALTHOUGH repeated attempts have been made to compose the differences between the Irish Free State Government and the Republican leaders, Ireland is still an armed camp.

Seven Republicans were executed throughout Ireland on March 13, indicating a resumption by the Free State Government of its previous policy of uncompromising severity against rebels convicted of bearing arms or participating in acts of violence.

When the last amnesty offer expired on Feb. 18, fifty-five executions had been carried out by the Free State Government. A soldier was executed at Maryboro Barracks eight days later, after being found guilty of treachery.

For some unexplained reason the people recently have believed that executions by the Government had ceased, though rebel activities were continuing of the same character as those for which the death penalty previously had been exacted, and recent utterances of President Cosgrave and the Home Affairs Minister, Mr. O'Higgins, and the declaration by the labor leader, Deputy Johnson, should have turned the public mind to seriously reconsider the whole situation.

Nevertheless the news of the latest executions came as a great surprise, amounting almost to shock, accentuated hourly as details came in that the death penalty had been exacted in Mullingar, Dublin, Cork and Wexford, with a grim total of seven executions, bringing the grand total to date to sixty-three.

Beer at $300 a Bottle : French Activities in Ruhr

RUHR DEVELOPMENT

The tension between the French and Germans was greatly increased when on March 10 the bodies of Second Lieut. Coltin of the Chasseurs and M. Joly, who was filling the post of station-master of Buer, were found on a country road by a French patrol. They had been killed with revolver bullets. The bodies were twenty paces apart and each had one bullet hole in the back. The men had been shot by an expert hand. Immediate search was made for the murderer or murderers and two men were arrested on the charge of being the assassins. They attempted to escape from their French captors and were shot down and killed. A German mob formed and attacked the French, who fired, killing five and wounding others.

The German population of the Recklinghausen district, in which the town of Buer is situated, has been warned by General Leignelot, commanding the district, that in the event any further

French troops were assassinated or ambushed the Burgomaster of Buer, who is held as a hostage, together with four other town officials, would be shot at once as a measure of retaliation.

This warning accompanied a general announcement that the French military authorities, because of the increase in acts of violence and in sabotage in various parts of the Ruhr, would take the severest measures to stop these attacks.

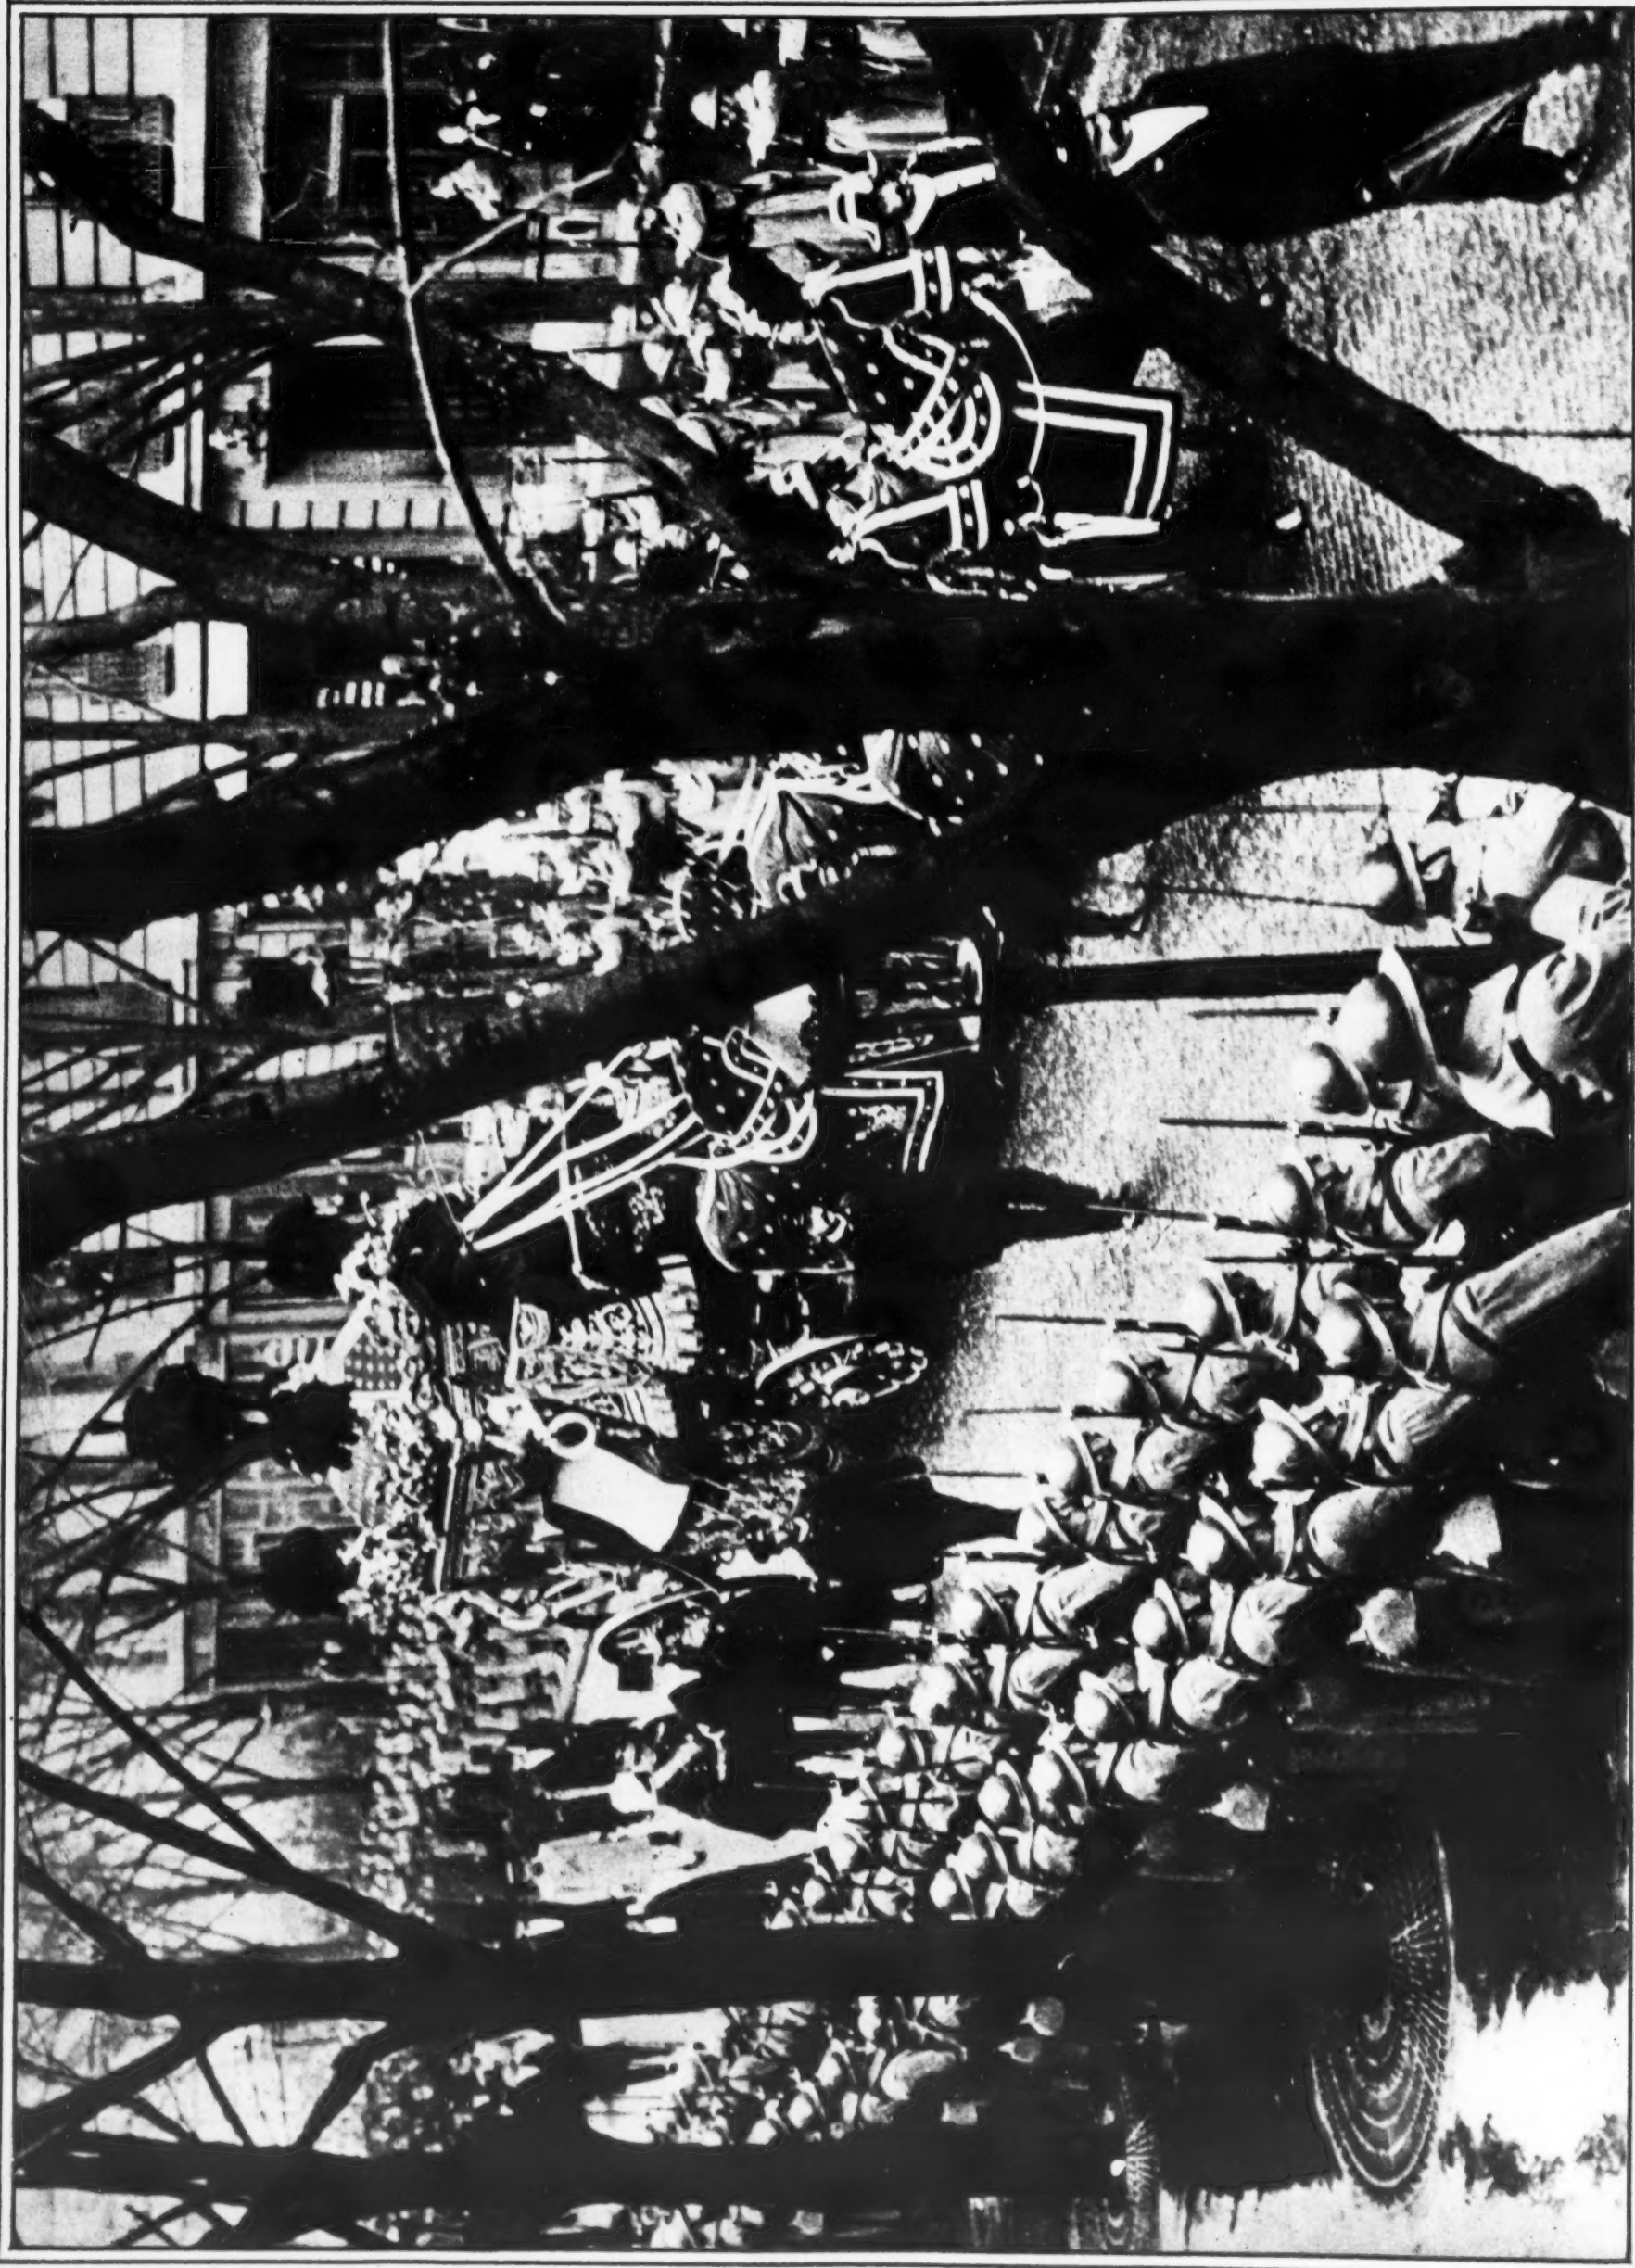

The residents of Buer have been ordered to remain indoors after 7 o'clock at night. All lights in the houses must be extinguished at 10 o'clock. During the daytime men in the streets or other public places must not put their hands in their pockets. The Burgomaster has appealed to the people to remain calm if only for the sake of the hostages.

Various acts of sabotage are being reported daily, and in many recent cases the work of destruction along the railroads and at the bridges was accomplished by means of dynamite or other high explosives. It is announced in this connection that, owing to the increased use of explosives for such acts, the French were considering holding Burgomasters and other town officials as hostages, and were even planning to compel these officials to ride on the locomotives in the danger zone.

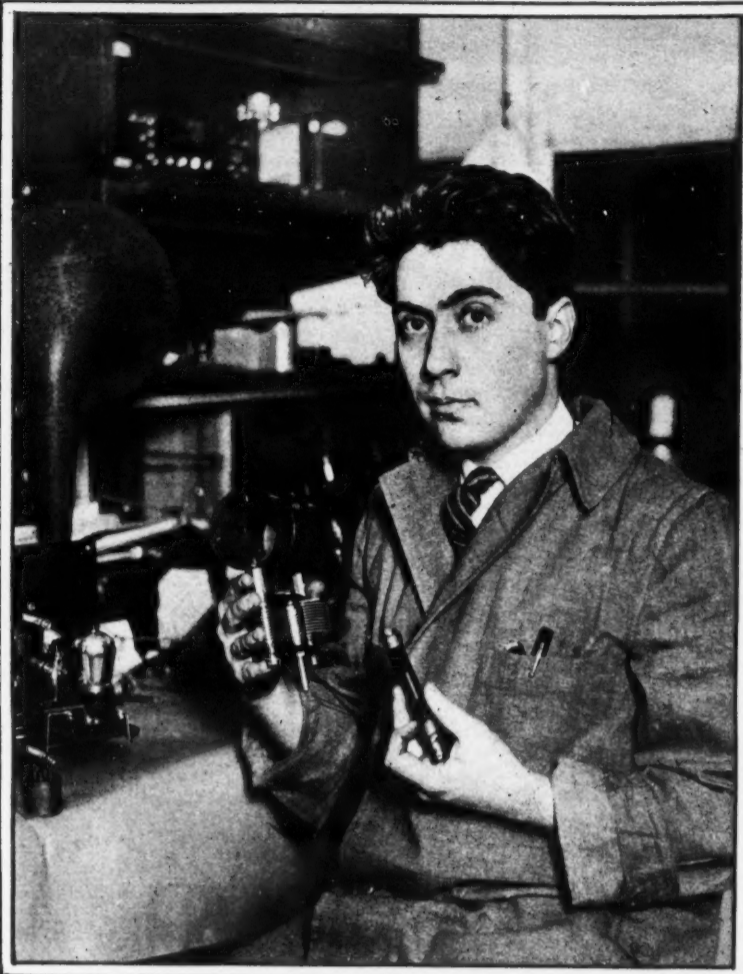

Funeral Cortege of Noted French States- man

ALMOST princely rites accorded M. Théophile Delcassé, former Prime Minister of France and one of the most noted statesmen of the early years of this century. The foremost figures of France were present on the occasion, and M. Poincaré, the present French Premier, delivered a speech of appreciation, while Marshal Joffre and Marshal Foch accompanied the hearse to the cemetery. The chief title to fame of the dead statesman was his prominence in the establishment of the entente cordiale between France and Great Britain. At the time that war was threatened over the Fashoda incident it was Delcassé's masterful handling of the problem that restored harmony between the two great nations. The dead statesman had held in his time many portfolios in various cabinets. (International.)

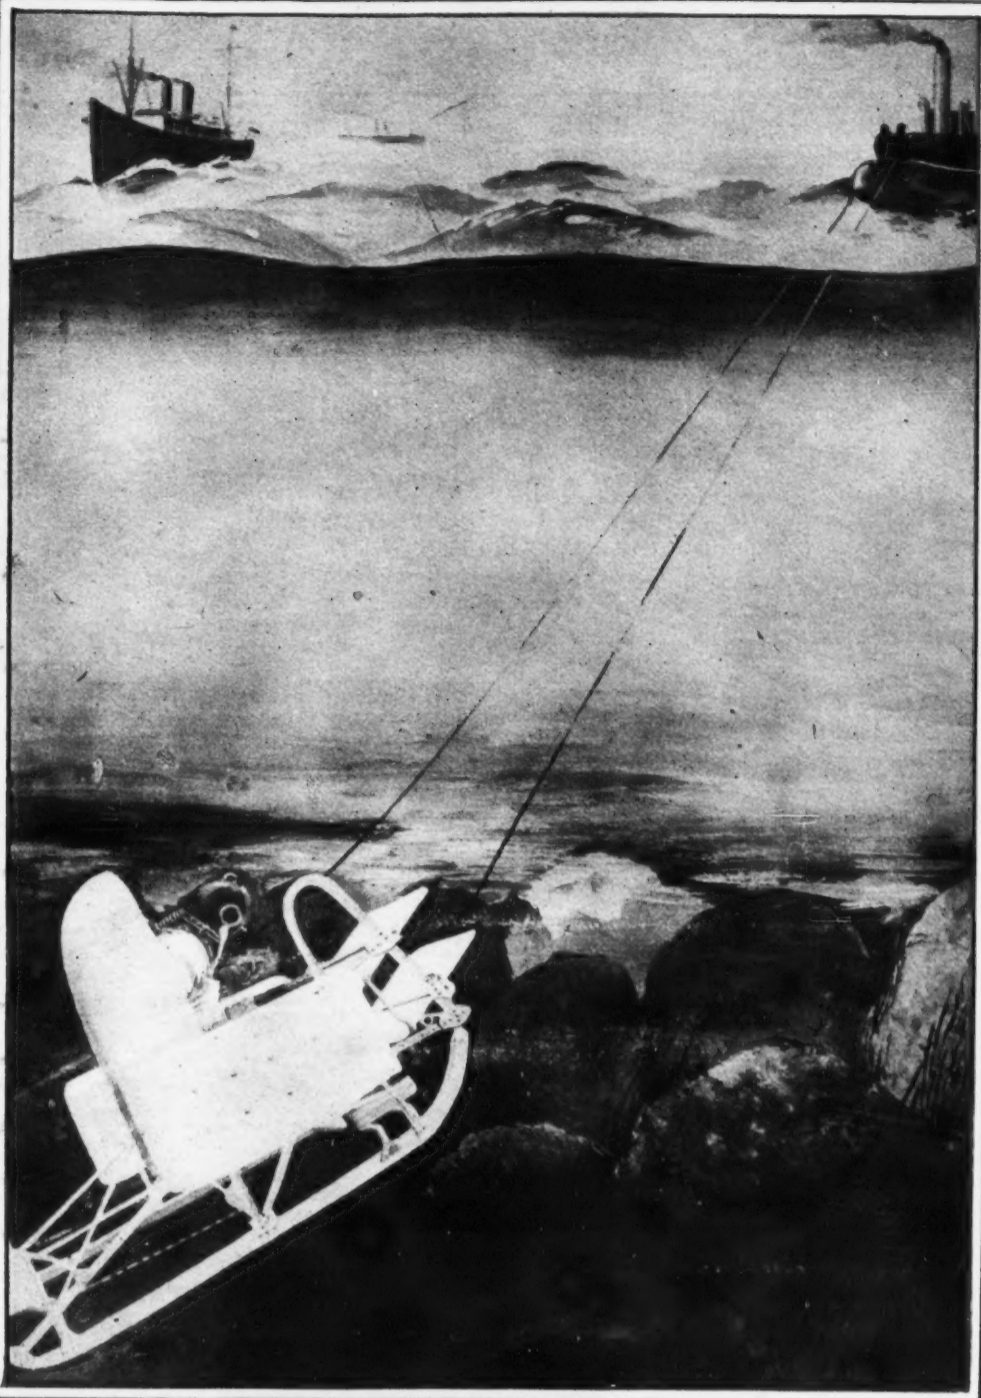

Latest Inventions in Radio and Other Fields of Science

REMARKABLE RADIO NEUTRODYNE RECEIVER

A radio set that will cover any distance, that will work without any aerial or ground, embodying entirely new fundamental principles, was demonstrated recently before a capacity audience at Columbia University by Professor Louis A. Hazeltine of the Stevens Institute of Technology, who invented it. This receiver is claimed to be incapable of oscillation, is non-radiating and utilizes two stages of tuned radio frequency, detector and two stages of audio frequency, five tubes being used. The set can be operated entirely by dry batteries and opens up an entire new field for development.

NEW DIVING DEVICE

A novel contrivance for salvaging sunken treasures has recently been perfected in Germany in a diving apparatus which may be successfully worked about 250 feet under water. Air lines are done away with and the diver is furnished with his own compressed air and oxygen tank. He has electric light to illuminate his under-water search and can use electricity in cutting through the side of ship plates. There is a diving lock into which the diver can enter, equipped with all possible apparatus, including storage batteries and food. Above, the diver is shown at work and at left is a close-up view of the diving sled or lock.

SAFETY TEST

For the great Empire exhibition which is to be held in England an enormous stadium has been erected. Great crowds are expected and in order to test the safety and strength of the grandstand, dead-load tests have been made with sacks of sand placed at intervals corresponding to those that will be occupied by seats. One of the constructors is here seen adding his live weight to the dead weight of the sand. The bags vastly exceed in weight the average weight of a man.

Liquor Awaiting Rum Runners : Disastrous Fire

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS' WORTH OF LIQUORS

THIRTEEN LIVES ARE TOLL OF KANSAS CITY FIRE

IT has been proved beyond question that a large portion of the liquor that is being smuggled into the United States comes from the countries north and south of us on this continent. Much comes from Canada, but most of this is smuggled across the border line on land and comparatively little comes by sea. A considerably larger quantity, however, comes from the Bahamas, which because of their nearness to the United States can get their contraband cargoes to these shores in a few days and which can take advantage of the almost numberless places for the landing and distribution of liquor that are to be found along our enormous coast line. It will be remembered that a somewhat similar condition existed during the Civil War, when the Union blockade of the Southern ports was frequently set at naught by blockade runners from Nassau and other places in the Bahamas. It was stated recently by a member of the House of Representatives that not less than a million gallons of liquor were smuggled annually from these islands into the United States. Although sometimes a rum-running vessel is seized, a great proportion of the vessels land their cargoes successfully and the profits from the illicit trade are so heavy that an occasional capture can be written down to the account of profit and loss.

HEAD OF AMERICAN ARMY
A new portrait of General John J. Pershing, commander of the American Army, painted from life by Mlle. Micheline Resco at the national capital. (Photo Hagelstein Bros.)

It was recently stated in high American official quarters that the Administration, while fully recognizing that the serious difficulties the Government is facing in the smuggling of liquor into the country might be met effectively with the assistance of British authorities in British territory, could see no method of improving prohibition conditions by diplomacy. The matter had been taken up diplomatically with the British Government.

THRILLING RACE

Joie W. Ray, Illinois A. C. flash, gained a sweet revenge for his defeat by Willie Ritola, Finnish-American A. C. star, at the K. of C. games by capturing the 5,000-meter invitation run for the Schiff Trophy, the feature event of the Western Union games at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory March 7. Ray not only defeated Ritola, but he lowered the American indoor record for the distance from 15:01 2-5 to 14:54 3-5.

A record-breaking crowd saw Ray hang at Ritola's heels for more than three miles, frustrating every attempt of the Finn to shake him off, and then opening up with a great burst of speed on the last lap, to win by more than thirty yards. The rest of the field was hopelessly outdistanced by the pair.

Ritola, who was the holder of the record of 15:01 2-5, which he established Feb. 24, also broke his own American indoor record by finishing in 14:59 3-5. He made a game attempt to close on the speeding Ray in the last lap, but although he almost doubled his pace Ray drew steadily away and the crowd rushed out of the bleachers to welcome the diminutive Illinois star as he broke the tape ahead of Ritola. Ilmar Prim, Finnish-American A. C., who was third, was more than 300 yards behind the two leaders.

Eight starters faced the gun, and at the crack of the pistol Ritola, who was third from the inside, took the lead. Ray, fifth from the inside, sprinted into a position at Ritola's heels, giving way only for a moment in the third lap to August Fager, who soon dropped out of the race entirely.

Ritola covered the first mile in 4:41 and the second in 9:31 1-5, and continued into the third mile with Ray thundering at his heels. It was plain that Ritola had nothing left, while Ray, apparently as fresh as in the first mile, hung doggedly on to make his final bid for victory.

MURAL DECORATION BY ARTISTIC DIRECTOR OF THE CHAUVE-SOURIS

Fantastic and yet with touches of undeniable power is this mural decoration on the wall of a recently opened New York restaurant, portraying a waiter attending the wants of a corpulent and wealthy customer while neglecting the demands of the more humble patrons. The painting is by Nicolai Remizoff.

U. S. Dreadnoughts at Battle Manoeuvres Off Panama : Unique B

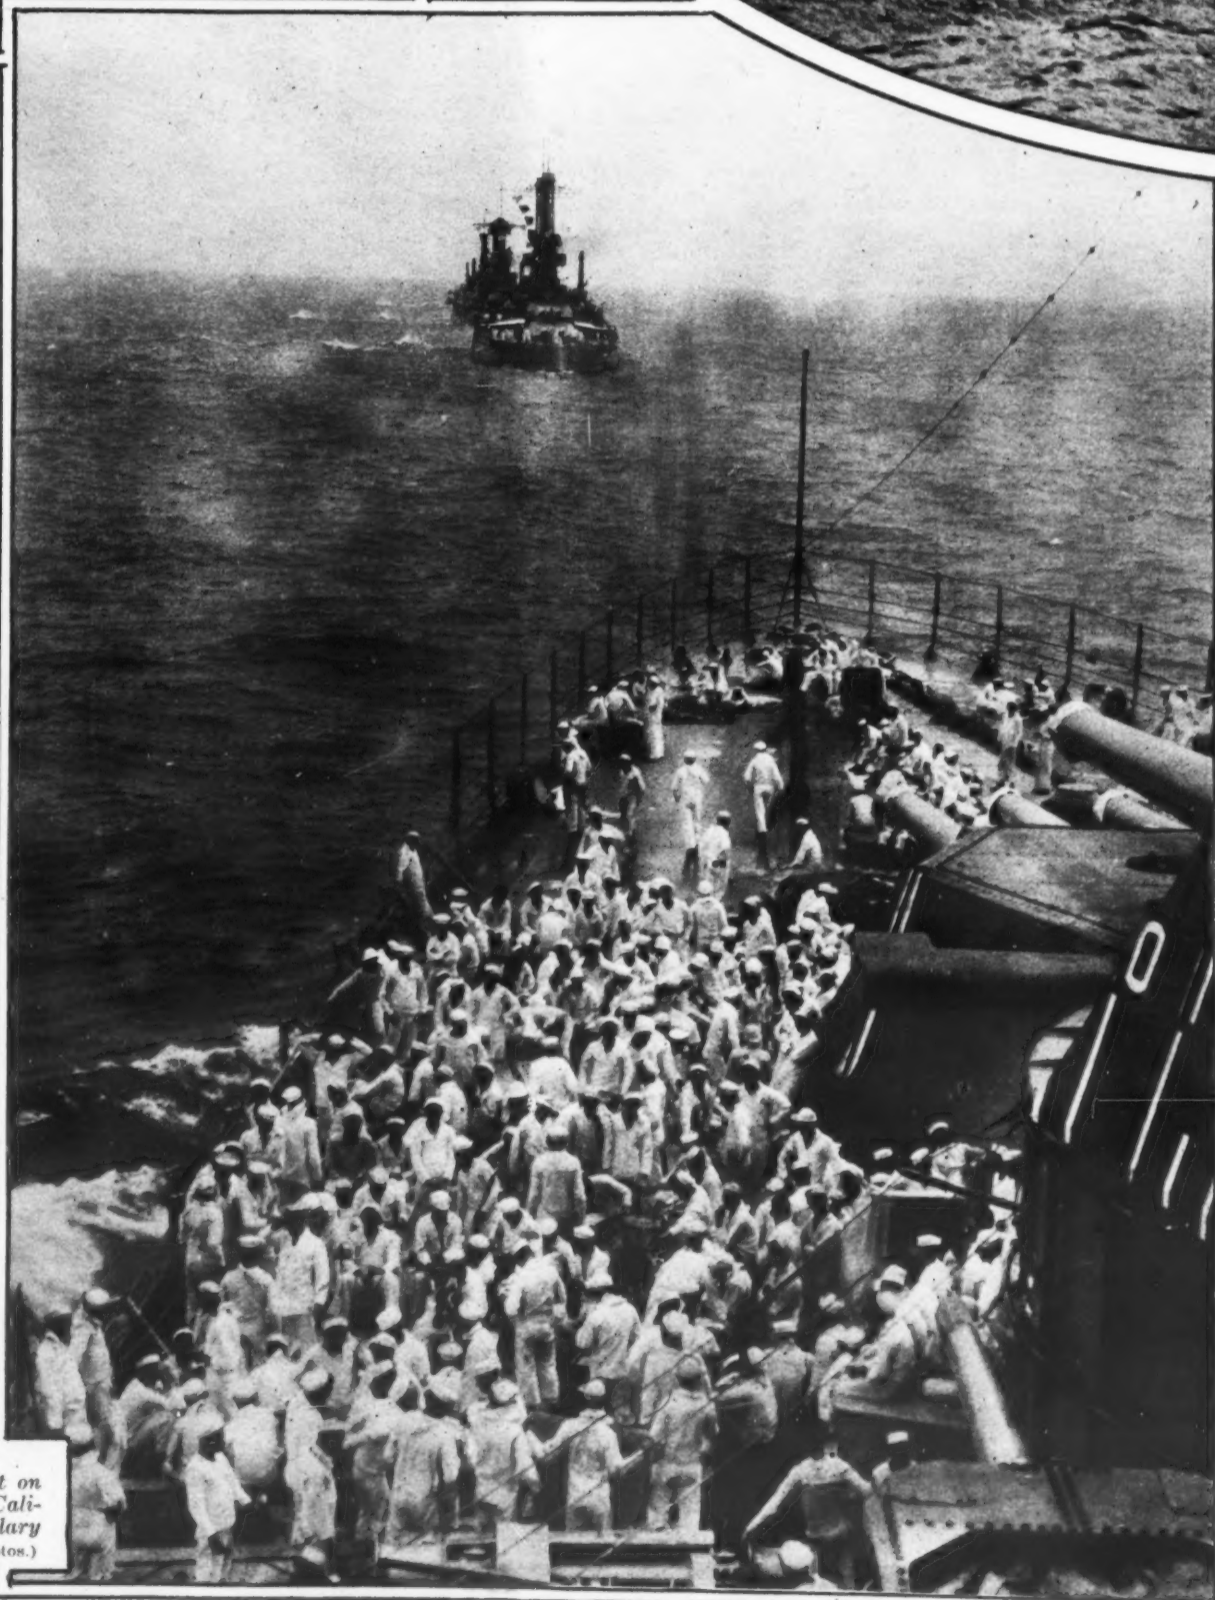

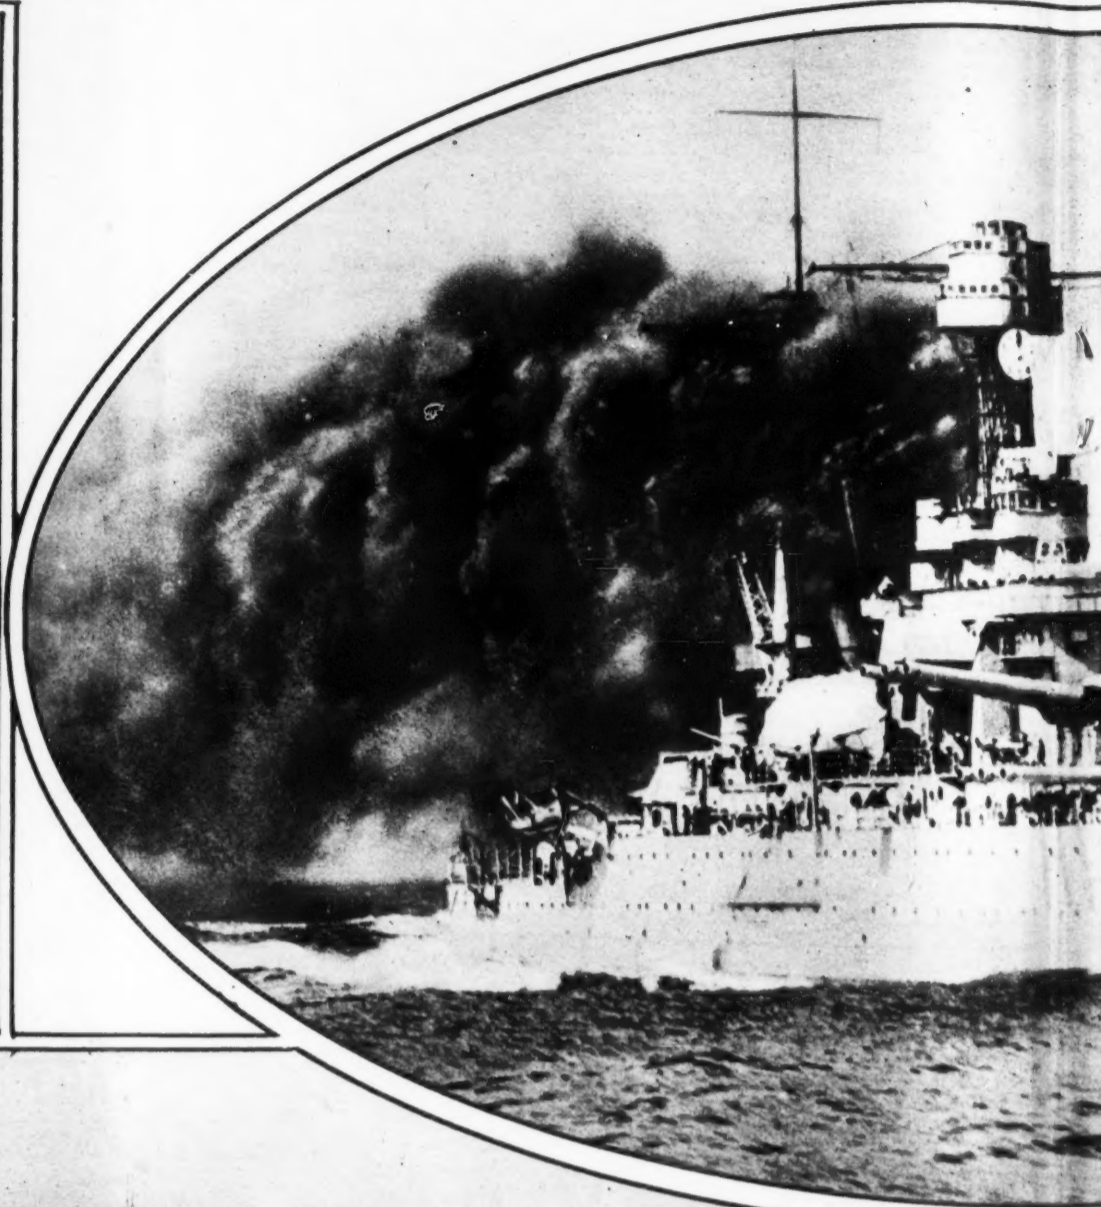

SLIDING ON HIS HANDS

A novel baseball play was this made by George Purcell in a local game played between rival hotel teams at Ormond, Fla., when he came sliding into the bag on his hands with his feet up in the air. It is not likely to become popular among big league players. (Fotograms.)

THE most important battle practice and naval manoeuvres of the United States fleet since the ending of the war are at present taking place off the coast of Panama. Both the Atlantic and Pacific Fleets have been combined under the command of Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, whose flagship is the California. Rear Admiral Eberle, having as his flagship the dreadnought Maryland, is also participating in the manoeuvres of the fleet. Almost all of the United States dreadnoughts now in commission are assembled off the coast, and the battle practice is being watched with interest by United States Secretary of the Navy Denby. One of the important things sought to be determined in this year's manoeuvres is the vulnerability to attack of the Panama Canal. A section of the destroyers and other auxiliary craft had been chosen to represent a possible enemy whose task it was to secure such a position near the canal that it could be easily attacked. The rest of the fleet was supposed to thwart this attempt. In the sham battle, however, the "hostile fleet" had the advantage, for it eluded the searchlights of the defending fleet and quietly dropped anchor within easy reach of the canal locks. No doubt other attempts will be made in order to develop a plan of defense that shall render the mighty engineering work immune.

ARGENTINE HEAVYWEIGHT KNOCKS OUT BRENNAN

Out of Bill Brennan by Luis Firpo, the Argentine heavy-weight boxer and an aspirant to the crown of Jack Dempsey, in twelfth round of their bout at Madison Square Garden, New York City, March 10. The victor is standing in the right-hand corner.

FIRPO-BRENNAN BOXING BOUT

Considerable interest existed in sporting circles as the outcome of the recent boxing bout staged between Luis Firpo, the Argentine heavyweight, and Brennan, the American pugilist, which recently took place in Madison Square Garden, New York City. It will be remembered that Brennan survived until the twelfth round in his fight with Dempsey a year or so ago. By a coincidence he also lasted until the twelfth round in the fight with Firpo, being finally sent down for the count in that round. A regrettable feature of the bout was that Brennan is said to be suffering from concussion of the brain, sustained during the encounter. The victory places Firpo in direct line for a possible fight with Dempsey for the world's championship.

PRESIDENT AND WIFE ON VACATION

The Chief Executive of the nation, with Mrs. Harding, has laid aside the affairs of state temporarily and is now sojourning in Florida as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. McLean at Washington on their houseboat Pioneer. Both the President and his wife are said to be enjoying their vacation thoroughly. It is exceedingly gratifying to know that Mrs. Harding has almost entirely recovered from her recent severe and prolonged illness. The President himself has cut loose as far as possible from official messages and responsibilities, and under the balmy skies of Florida is relaxing and getting into shape for the resumption of his official duties. It goes without saying that most of his days are spent on the golf links.

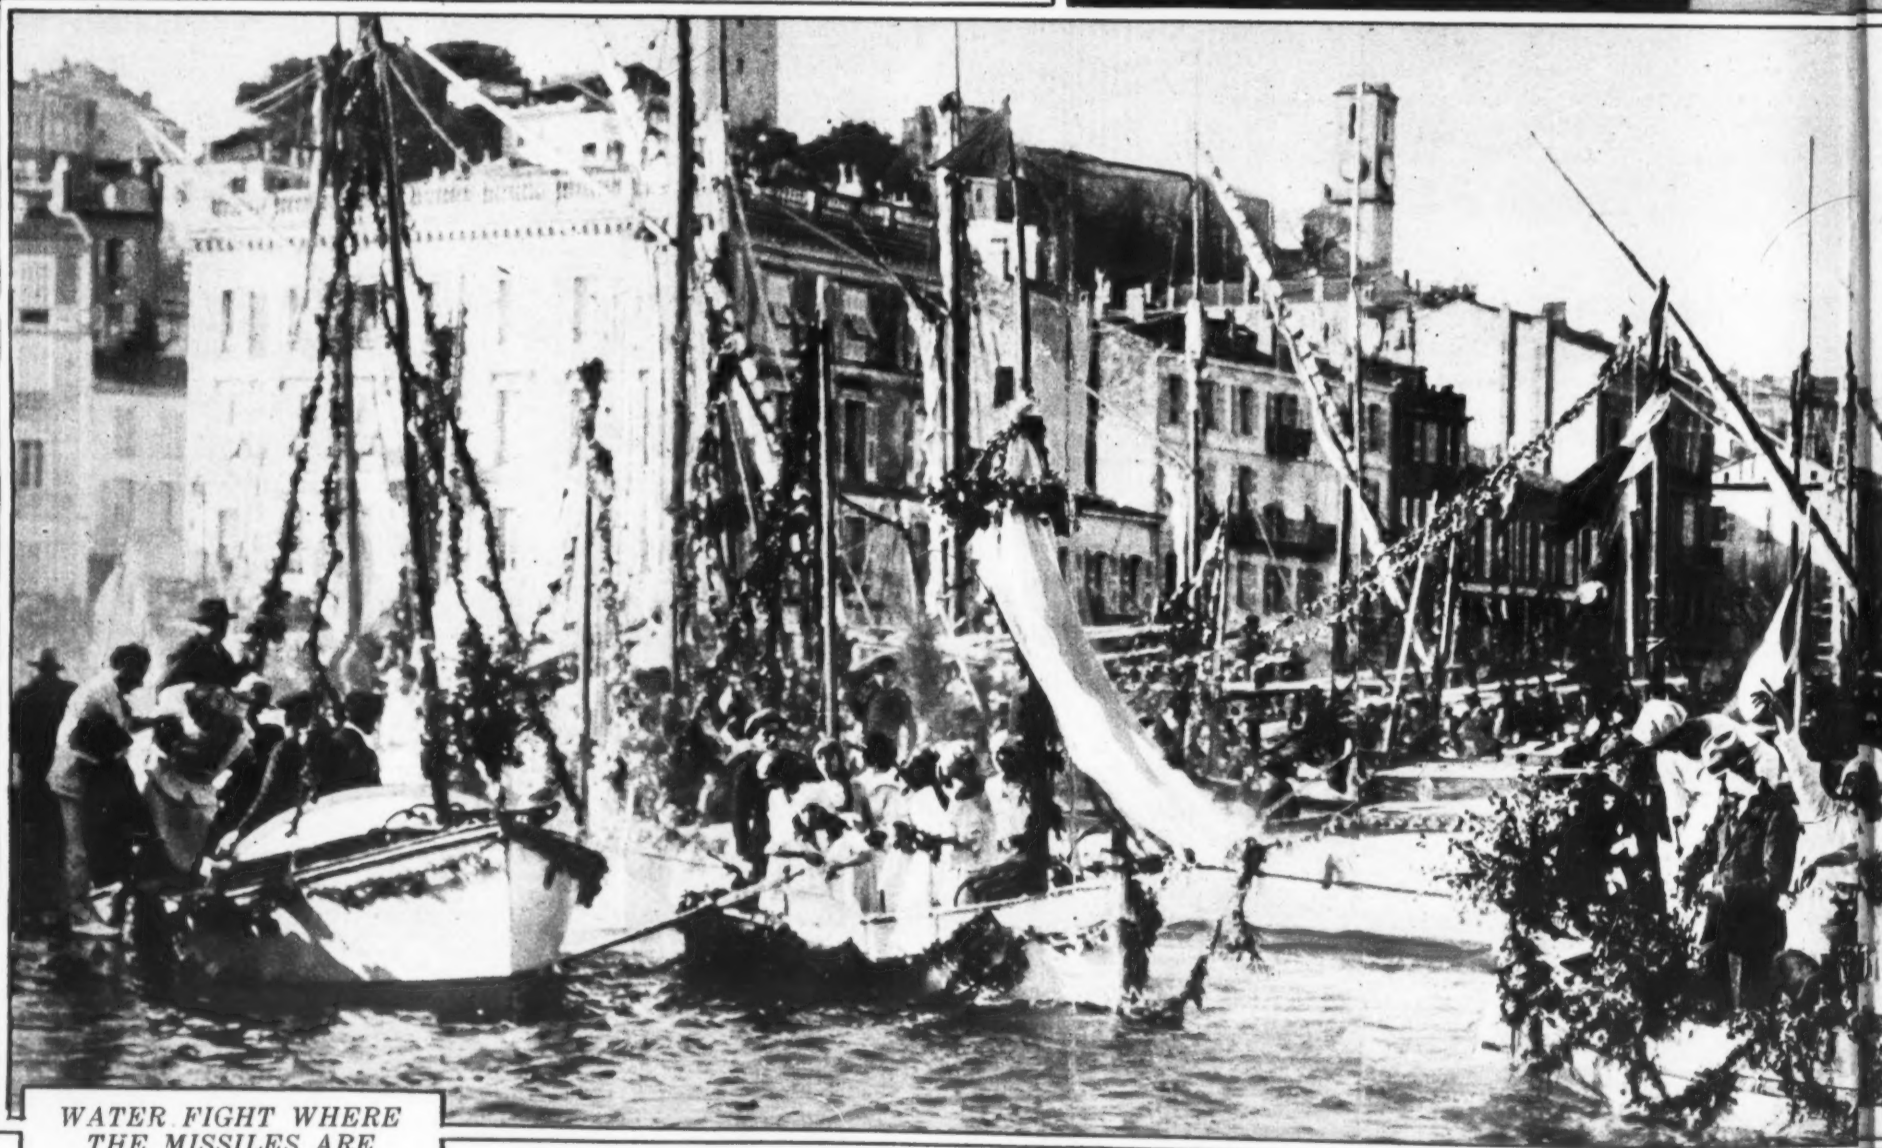

World's Champion Woman Tennis Player : Thrilling

MLLE. LENGLEN

Famous French woman tennis champion of the world, training hard on the courts at Cannes while getting in form for her forthcoming match with Mrs. Mallory, the American champion. The remarkable muscular development of Mlle. Lenglen is worthy of note. Her training stood her in good stead, for when she met Mrs. Mallory she won the match in two straight sets.

AN event that set all England agog was the birth on Feb. 7 of a son and heir to Princess Mary, daughter of George V. Her marriage to Viscount Lascelles on Feb. 28 of last year, was one of the most brilliant royal and social events that the British capital has known for many years. The baby is said to have weighed eight pounds at birth and to be a vigorous and healthy infant. The fact that his grandfather is the reigning King of England will not give the newcomer a royal title. For the present he will be known as plain Master Lascelles. In time, of course, he will, if he lives long enough, succeed to the title of his father, the Viscount, who, though not descended from one of the great historic families of the English nobility, is prospective heir to one of the richest estates in Great Britain. Another marriage in the royal circle is scheduled soon to take place, that of the Duke of York, second son of the King, to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, daughter of the Earl of Strathmere.

FAMOUS WOMAN ATHLETE
The continued supremacy of Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen in the field of women tennis players is one of the most remarkable things in the history of athletics. Season after season passes, and although she is forced to meet the best of women players of all nations, she still maintains her crown. She faltered once when she visited America and tested her skill against Mrs. Molla Mallory, the American woman champion. She was defeated then, but she has since regained her laurels, beating Mrs. Mallory decisively last season and quite as decisively in the one match they have played so far this year. If one attempts to analyze her game it is hard to tell in what feature she excels, so excellent is her showing in all departments of the game.

Scenes From Latest Plays: "Barnum Was Right" : "Pasteur" "Anything Might Happen"

Scene in the farcical comedy, "Barnum Was Right," at the Frazee Theatre, where Verdi (George E. Mack) is being arrested by Harrison (Denman Maley) on a charge of having stolen the jewels that were found in the house reputed to be haunted. The play revolves about a young man (Donald Brian), who wishes to marry a girl (Marion Coakley) despite her father's objections, and in order to obtain money remodels an old Long Island house and seeks to sell it at a high price by adroit intimations that it was a cache for pirates' gold.

Tense moment in "Pasteur," at the Empire Theatre, New York, when the little boy (William Pierce) comes to the laboratory with his grandfather, frightened and sick with a mad dog's lacerations on his hands and legs. The great French scientist, Louis Pasteur (Henry Miller), is full of tenderness and sympathy with the child, wins his confidence and effects a cure. The play, which is powerfully presented, is really a biography of Pasteur, shown first in his laboratory at the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian War, later at the Academy of Medicine, denouncing his detractors, and finally in his old age at home.

In "Anything Might Happen," playing at the Comedy Theatre, the adventures of Richard Keating (Roland Young) and Helen Springer (Estelle Winwood) lead them to a gilded cafe, where Howard Matthews (C. Haviland Chappell) volunteers to rescue Helen from Keating, who has been drinking from the pitcher on the table. Miss Craig (Florence Clarke), seated at the next table, does not like it at all. The adventures of the two pair of temporarily estranged lovers lead through an amusing and complicated series of coincidents to the usual happy ending.

First Anniversary of Pontificate of Pope Pius XI.

IMPRESSIVE ceremonies were held in Rome Feb. 12 in celebration of the completion of the first year of the Pontificate of Pope Pius XI. The high mass was sung by Cardinal Bonzano, who, it will be remembered, has been the Papal Legate to Washington and who is the first Cardinal to be appointed by Pope Pius. The Pope is so rarely photographed that especial interest attaches to the pictures on this page showing him (above) seated on the Papal throne in the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican during the progress of the ceremonies, and at left being borne from the chapel after the closing of the services. The Pope as yet has had no such serious problems as those which beset his predecessor, Benedict XV., during the turmoil of the World War, but his incumbency of the Papal office has been marked by vision and breadth of view in regard to the questions that have come before him.

X-Raying a Sick Elephant: Crumbling Lighthouse

MODERN SCIENCE APPLIED TO ELEPHANTINE ILLS

Wide Awake, a sick elephant in the Seattle (Wash.) Zoo, recently had the X-ray used on her in an effort to diagnose her ailment. The test failed, however, and although tremendous voltage was used nothing showed on the plates. The lead plate is here shown being adjusted.

(International.)

THE elephant that bears the sprightly name of Wide Awake has so established herself in the affections of the youthful visitors to the Seattle Zoo that when she fell sick recently the school children helped raise a fund for an X-ray experiment which it was hoped might enable the doctors to find out what was the matter with her. The test was made and Wide Awake submitted without too much objection, but to the chagrin of the doctors they were unable to get any results. The conclusion drawn was that the elephant's hide was too thick for even the X-rays to penetrate. Ordinarily the plates have an exposure of only a fraction of a second, but in the elephant's case the exposure was prolonged to sixty seconds. Nothing came of it, however, and the test was set down as an "elephantine" failure.

DOOMED LIGHTHOUSE

Few lighthouses on the Atlantic Coast are better known to mariners than the old Barnegat Lighthouse, which for the last sixty-four years has been a beacon of help and warning in nights of fog and storm. The foundations are being so undermined that it seems only a question of time when the historic beacon will have to be abandoned. Already the home of the lightkeeper that formerly stood at the base of the structure has fallen a prey to the waves, which at this special point beat with unusual fury on the coast. The venerable structure is the only one of its kind that still uses kerosene vapor, but however old-fashioned the illuminant, it still gave forth a brilliant light that has saved many a vessel from destruction and many a crew from death.

AVIATORS FALL

Another of the airplane accidents that of late have become so distressingly common occurred recently when one of the navy airplanes that was being flown from the Philadelphia Navy Yard with the air base at Anacostia,

AIRPLANE CRASH

Two aviators, Lieutenant R. M. Farrar of Washington and Stephen F. Sullivan of Chicago were drowned when this giant navy seaplane fell recently from a height of 400 feet into the Delaware River.

(P. & A. Photos.)

Va., as its objective, crashed down into the Delaware River from a height of 400 feet. Both of the aviators were killed and the plane itself was completely wrecked. The qualities of coolness, resourcefulness and courage demanded of aviators are such that only the highest type of manhood suffices for the calling, which makes doubly regrettable the cutting off of such men in their prime.

CRUSHED BUILDING

It is not often that such an unusual train of events results in catastrophe as that which occurred on Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo., on March 6. A west-bound trolley car struck an automobile truck, whirled it around and sent it crashing into the front of a brick building with such terrific force that the entire front of the building fell into the street, blocking the car tracks. In the picture the auto truck, wedged into the wrecked building, is shown half filled

NEW SENATOR FROM NEW YORK

SENATOR COPELAND

Special interest attaches to the elevation of Dr. Royal S. Copeland to a seat in the United States Senate, succeeding Senator Calder, because of the wide and favorable reputation that the new Senator had gained while holding the office of Health Commissioner of New York City. In that post he was indefatigable in furthering all efforts looking to the health and physical upbuilding of the people of the metropolis.

"WASH"— Don't Scour Teeth.

You Wouldn't Scour Piano Keys.

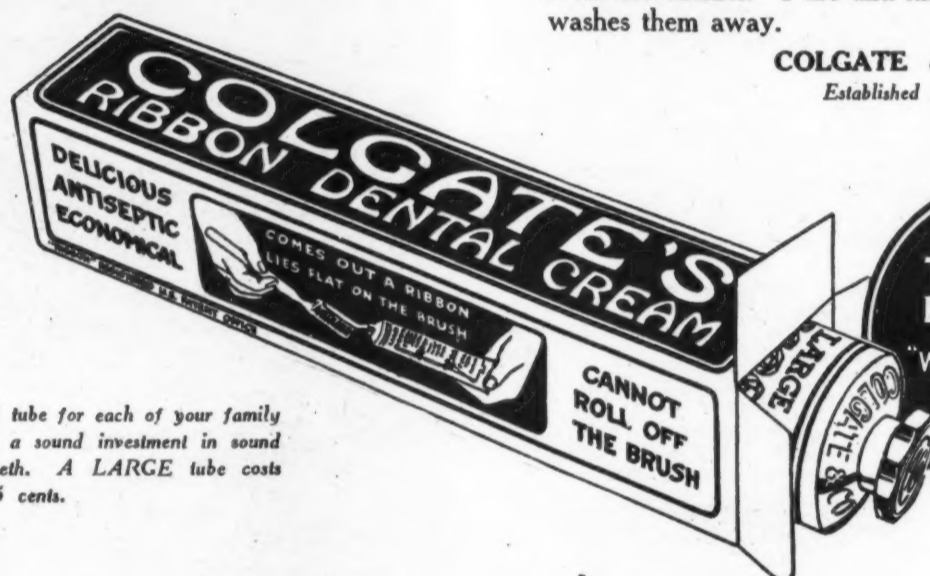

You would not use a grit cleaner on ivory piano keys. You know what grit would do to them. Ivory and teeth are first cousins—made of the same basic substance.

Every time you scratch your teeth you remove part of the surface. You can use Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream during a long lifetime without in the slightest degree injuring the delicate enamel of your teeth.

If you scoured away your skin Nature could replace it. But Nature cannot replace tooth enamel once it is worn away.

Colgate's washes teeth clean, safely and thoroughly. Its non-gritty precipitated chalk loosens clinging particles from the enamel. Pure and mild, its vegetable oil soap washes them away.
